

Coaching for Impact

Nonprofit executives are recognizing the value of leadership coaching. The Center for Nonprofit Leadership offers one-on-one and team coaching to executives, and key decision makers. Whether you are an experienced nonprofit executive or an emerging leader, a coach can bring a fresh perspective and new energy to what you are doing and where you want to go. Your leadership coach will provide a confidential “safe space” for reflecting, learning and creating actionable strategies for achieving impact.

A. Brian Leander, the assistant director of the Center, has been a provider of leadership development and coaching to nonprofit executives. His professional affiliations include the International Leadership Association and the Academy of Management where he has been a presenter. Brian believes that coaching creates opportunities for nonprofit executives to increase their capacity to address personal and organizational challenges and opportunities. Coaching is a means of fostering awareness, accountability and action, resulting in improved individual and organizational performance.

Your leadership coach will assist you to:

- Gain clarity in your personal mission, vision and impact.
- Develop a winning team to assist you to achieve your objectives.
- Set and achieve proactive, powerful goals rather than leaving the future to chance.
- Navigate the minefield of personal and organizational change.
- Breakout of self-defeating behaviors.
