LeadTime

Practical Resources for Today's Nonprofit Leader ...

Effective nonprofit leaders know that change is the one constant in the complex organizational environment. These leaders know that planning, strategy and organizational learning minimize the negative aspects of change while increasing the positive aspects. This month's LeadTime examines change management strategies and offers tools and tips for boards and executives who want to leverage organizational change for greater sustainability and impact.

Making Your Nonprofit More Agile Through Change Management

Effective nonprofit leaders use change management to control certain conditions to achieve their desired outcomes. Meghan Dankovich, in a recent blog discusses one of many frameworks for managing change.

Change Management is Not That Complicated

Change management is not complicated for leaders who understand that organizations are like people; people resist change when they have to exchange what is known (the present) for what is unknown (the future). Therefore, effective leaders communicate a compelling vision for the future, the path the organization should take, and their own commitment to remain in the driver seat.

Check out this YouTube clip that visualizes how to communicate the change management process:

Measuring What Matters

Metrics are a way of measuring your organization's performance as it moves from the present state to its preferred future, and ultimately towards social impact. A recent article in the Philanthropy Journal reviews resources and offers techniques, tools and tips for using data to make progress towards your goals. A few highlights include:

1. Developing good metrics
2. Prioritizing what you collect
3. Building a shared culture

Sustainability and Impact Could Depend on How Well Your Organization Adapts

It is sometimes helpful to understand change management in the context of a framework that can simplify the concept. TCC Group developed a model of organizational effectiveness that explains the how a nonprofit can be effective over time if it is strong in the leadership, management and technical domains, and adaptive.

New York State's New Nonprofit Revitalization Act

On June 21, the New York State Assembly and the Senate unanimously passed the Nonprofit Revitalization Act. The Act includes substantial reforms that will cut red tape while enhancing governance and oversight of nonprofits. The Act is a product of over two years' work by New York State Attorney General Eric T. Schneiderman's office and the statewide Leadership Committee on Nonprofit Revitalization. Center Director, Ann Marie Thigpen served on the Leadership Committee for Nonprofit Revitalization.
